

Telephones are supposed to be a "luxury" and while not always still thought of - I do not believe my privacy should be disturbed without my permission - Just as my town does not allow solicitors without proper permission and approval - so should my telephone be off limits to anyone who feels they want to interrupt my life by entering what can be an intrusive method of communication. As long as the telephones are taxed and charged fees by the government since they are a "luxury" then the government has the responsibility to keep them luxurious. People cannot enter my automobile or house or scream at my door to intrude on my privacy without permission how is it they can enter through a method of communication that is unwanted. If my telephone cannot be "tapped" by law it must be considered an area where privacy is expected - please maintain that privacy -
thank you
